Turning students at The Ohio State University into fully devoted disciples of Jesus Christ, through campus worship services, small groups, leadership communities and outreach.

I went to church at the University of Michigan for the first time because I saw a poster on campus. I sat in the back and was trying to leave unnoticed, but one of the staff greeted me before I could do so. He invited me to a small group where we discussed the validity of the Bible and why Christ is the only way to heaven. I was deeply impacted by the fact that Jesus wanted to spend infinite amounts of time with me. My whole life, friendships had been transient, never lasting more than a few years. God's love was so different, so much better.

Before I knew Christ, I wanted to change laws and try to change the world. When I found Christ, I realized that the best way to change the world is to allow God to change people's hearts through sharing the Gospel and living it out.

I came to The Ohio State University to plant a church here because such a small portion of the student body was being engaged with the Gospel and I wanted to be part of changing that. Now I lead an H2O team on South Campus at OSU where our mission is to see students become disciples of Jesus Christ who are equipped and prepared to influence their families, workplaces, and the world.

A gospel-centered community whose mission is to see OSU students become disciples of Jesus Christ who influence the world.
