

InterVarsity Christian Fellowship at OSU—Bob Trube

To equip and mobilize world-changers among graduate students and faculty.

A conversation last winter with the Secular Students Alliance president led to a partnership between this group and our graduate fellowship in co-hosting along with university sponsorship, a Veritas Forum on Faith and Reason: Friends or Enemies. Over 300 students and faculty (including the chair of the philosophy department) attended the event last April, with at least 38% self-identifying in our after-survey as other than Christian. Here are a few of the comments we received:

“A lot of my experience with Christians interacting with other Christians was negative. My parents, while claiming to be open to other beliefs, do not really practice what they preach. Seeing a Christian and an atheist interact peacefully and productively was refreshing.”

“I loved how open and respectful the questions were. I was glad that people could ask difficult questions without anyone making personal, emotional attacks.”
